BIBLE NOT A "MUST BOOK"

"Good Fun to Read It," a Lecturer Tells His Audience at Minneapolis.

Such glowing epithets as "magnetic," "fascinating," "deliciously erring" and "human" were directed toward the Bible by Professor Burton of the University of Minnesota, according to the Minneapolis Journal.

"The Bible is good fun to read. Pick it up impulsively, involuntarily as you would any other book," he told an audience of students and visitors in Minneapolis.

The discourse on the Bible was the last lecture in a running series on "Books Often Talked About but Seldom Read," which the university had offered to the public.

Defending the choice of the Bible for discussion among books seldom read, Doctor Burton declared that if the number of those who read the book perforce and those who read it nominally were subtracted and the total number of readers further reduced to those who read because of love of the reading, the justice of including the Bible in the series would become apparent.

"Reference to the attraction of the Bible goes with stock joke references to the goat and the mother-in-law," he said. "It is regarded in the popular mind as a 'must book,' an aristocratic, removed book."

Doctor Burton said the Bible was the most dramatic book in the world.

RIGHT WHERE HE BELONGED

Dilapidated Specimen of Humanity Offered Himself as a Specimen of "Woman's Work."

Great was the excitement in a small English town. The local ladies had decided to hold an exhibition of women's work, with a view to providing a treat for the poor children of the parish.

While the committee were busily engaged in arranging their exhibits to the best advantage in the parish hall, there came a timid knock at the outer door. When the door was opened a strange-looking object entered. It, or rather, he, was a man. His face was a mass of scratches, his hair stood out round his head like tufts of grass, his collar was dangling loosely behind, and his clothes were little better than rags.

"Please, I've come!" he said, simply.

"But—but—" stammered the honorary secretary. "This is not a museum; it's for a display of specimens of women's work only."

"That's all right!" he replied, dejectedly. "I am a specimen of woman's work!"

NOVEL BATTLE.

A dispatch from Millville, N. J., tells of a battle between a skunk and a snake. We had thought that we had observed the most romantic fight in all the world one time in Porto Rico between a lizard and a scorpion, but this one, between a large and lusty polecat and a six-foot snake eclipses utterly the modest encounter we witnessed. For a half hour that battle raged, until at last the skunk managed to fasten its teeth in the back of the snake, and that closed the reptile's career. Bravo, for the skunk, everybody will say, but the hunters, who watched the conflict, proceeded to kill the skunk, a most shameful treatment of a beautiful and courageous little brute that took it upon itself to inflict the curse of Eden.—Columbus (O.) Journal.

GOOD-BY CALL.

First Speculator—Now take P. D. Q.—that, for the money, I call a good buy.

Second Speculator—Yes—for the money—good-by.—Judge.

HER VIEWS.

"My husband is rich."

"Still, you should not be extravagant."

"Well, now, it would be foolish to try to hash up left-over terrapin."

HIS COSTLY MISTAKE.

"What ruined your business?"

"Advertising."

"How?"

"I let it all be done by my competitors."

HIS QUALIFICATION.

"Do you think Ned would 'super' for us in our play?"

"I'm sure he would, for he's a broth of a boy."

Got Rid of My Corns With Magic "Gets-It"

JUST HIS LUCK.

"That Mr. Twobble is a dreadful man," said Mrs. Dubwaite.

"Why so, my dear?" asked Mr. Dubwaite.

"I saw him yesterday watching two small boys fight without making any effort to stop them."

"Well, what if he did?"

"Mr. Dubwaite, I'd hate to think that you would act like that."

"No chance, my dear. I'm always so blamed busy that I have no time for amusements."

Man's Acquaintance With Fire. The progressive steps of man's acquaintance with fire are three—the knowledge of fire, the means of utilizing it and the means of preserving it. The last step, which is one of the most important in the history of man's development, is fully illustrated by the series of different apparatus and materials. Many improvements have followed the first steps in man's progress, and each method has been subject to various modifications by different peoples. What was probably the first method, that of rubbing two sticks together with the hands, was improved by reciprocating motion effects; the twirling of one stick held vertically between the palms and resting on a second lying horizontally on the ground, then by the addition of a bow and socket, followed by the weighted stick as in the pump drill, and finally the machine with cogwheels and crank as employed in Sudan.

GIRLS, CULTIVATE A SMILE

Pleasant Expression Will Bring Young Women From Ranks of Plainness to Heights of Beauty.

Cultivate your smiles unceasingly, girls. This does not mean that you must sit in street cars wearing an insipid grin. Not at all! It does not even mean that you must actually smile in the literal sense of the word. But your expression can be smiling without your lips being parted at all. If you are thinking about pleasant occurrences your mouth will turn up at the corners and your eyes will sparkle, quite naturally and without any effort.

This will keep your face attractive and youthful, even when you have passed the borders of youth itself. If you wish to retain your beauty as long as possible, don't form the habit of letting your lips droop and all your face muscles sag downward when your face is in repose.

Just stand before the mirror and pull your lines down to get the effect. Draw your mouth down and scowl a bit and you will see just how ugly those drooping lines can make you look. Then smile, not artificially but naturally, just a little around the lips, but a great deal in the eyes, and you will see how pretty you can appear.

If every woman realized how much harm she is doing to herself when she sits with her face muscles all relaxed and drooping she would try the smile cure for ugly lines. The smile can bring about magical results in lifting a girl from the ranks of plainness to the heights of actual beauty.

HAPPIEST MAN MOST HONEST

He Has No Bad Habits and So He Is Always Prosperous—He Works for Good Living.

We have noticed the happiest man many a time. He works for his living and he gets a good one. One thing we notice is he is a man of fine habits; doesn't squander a cent on liquor, tobacco or betting. He saves his money and is getting ready to buy some property. He loves his home, plays with the children, reads good books and keeps company with his wife. Because of his good habits he saves a little, which will give him a chance to make an investment.

And then there is another thing—he is a reliable man. He does good work. He will not smooth over bad work. He is honest in whatever he does. Every dollar he gets represents just that much of honest labor. It is this, largely, that makes him prosperous and happy.

Water keeps its own level, and so does conduct and character and prosperity. If a man is mean and low, so will the consequences be. He cannot be one thing and his experience another. A low-lived man may grow rich and happy, but it will not be for long. Anybody can tell what's the matter with a man if he is with him a day; he will soon see if the other is a spleen, a stomach, an uplift or a hope.—Ohio State Journal

MATTER OF SENTIMENT.

"What makes you go in through the kitchen?"

"I don't know our servants very well," replied Mr. Cumrox. "Some way, the front hall seems kind of informal and distant. Around at the kitchen steps they've got an old door-mat with 'Welcome' on it."

SAVED HIM THE TROUBLE.

Tom—How did you manage to break the ice with Miss Chillington? Jack—I didn't break it. I accidentally found her in a melting mood.

THEIR HOLD.

"I wonder why songs of the sea are generally popular."

"I suppose it is on account of the whistling buoys."

UNPROFICIENT.

"I suppose you play golf?"

"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I can't say that I play it. But I am still working at it."

PARADOXICAL FEARS.

"Naturally, there is a lot of log rolling about presidential timber."

"Yes, but it never wants to feel the ax."

APPROPRIATE ACTION.

"James made a big leap for the medicine on the shelf."

"No wonder; he's got a jumping toothache."

Gate Attracts Attention.

Visitors to San Saba, Tex., usually pause before one house in a quiet street, where there is a most unusual gate. A carriage wheel, which just fits between the rough posts on either side, comprises the major part of the framework, while, above and below, pickets are nailed to complete the gate. The structure is strong and is adapted to its use, while at the same time it is quite the most distinctive among ornamental gates in the city.—Popular Mechanics.

Mean Insinuation.

"Yes," said the young singer complacently, "I had a great reception after my song last night. The audience shouted 'Fine! fine!'" "Good thing you didn't sing again," said the cynic. "Why, what do you mean?" "They would have yelled 'Imprisonment!' the second time."—Stray Stories.
